Examples:

Here are some common reasons medical modifications to the meal patterns are needed.

- Low-nutrient milk is prescribed. To count as a milk substitute, one cup of non-dairy (plant-based) milk must have 8 g protein, 2.5 mcg Vitamin D, 276 mg Calcium, 349 mg Potassium, 150 mcg Vitamin A, 0.44 mg Riboflavin, 1.1 mcg Vitamin B-12, 222 mg Phosphorus, and 24 mg Magnesium. A medical statement documenting a disability/impairment is required to claim milks that do NOT meet these guidelines, like almond milk, oat milk, coconut milk, flax milk, rice milk, hemp milk, or cashew milk.
- A 0-11 month old needs an FDA Exempt Infant Formula. Exempt formulas are made for infants that are on a special diet. This includes hypoallergenic formulas, preemie formulas, amino acid based formulas, and elemental formulas.
- Gluten free grain products are necessary. Gluten-Free (GF) foods, such as GF crackers and GF breads, are often high in added starches and may not contain the required 16 grams of allowable/creditable grains in a 28 gram portion. A medical statement is required to allow exceptions to the rules.
- Low or limited carbohydrate eating plans are required. These plans may require a site to skip or substitute some meal components. For example, a child who is limited to 15 grams of carbohydrate at a meal would not be able to receive all required components, since one grain and one milk serving would exceed 15 grams carbohydrate (ex. 1 slice bread (15 g carbs) + 1 cup milk (11 g carbs) = 26 g carbs).

Voluntary Authorization:

In accordance with the provisions of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) of 1996 and the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA), by signing above, I (the parent/guardian) authorize my child's medical provider to release such protected health information of my child as is necessary for the specific purpose of Special Diet information to Day Care Resources and I consent to allow the recognized medical authority to exchange the information listed on this form and in my child's records with the child care program as necessary. I understand that I may refuse to sign this authorization without impact on the eligibility of my request for a special diet accommodation for my child. I understand that I may rescind permission to release this information at any time, except when the information has already been released.
